Welcome to Puzzled Pint!

Tonight

- We're here to help! This is not a competitive event. Ask the Game Control volunteers (GC) for hints as often as you'd like. The goal is to have fun, not to be frustrated!
- Never read The Phantom Tollbooth (the theme of tonight's set) before? No problem. The puzzles and puns alike are accessible for all; no prior knowledge needed!

The Puzzles

- Each puzzle will solve to a short word or phrase. How? That's for you to discover.
- Need a code sheet or solving resources? Check out the Resources page on Puzzled Pint's webpage: <http://www.puzzledpint.com/resources/>
- You can use anything to help solve: Use your phone, the internet is fair game! Think your brother might have an insight? Give him a call!
- While each month has a theme, you need no special knowledge of the theme to solve.

ASSEMBLER OF AFFIXES

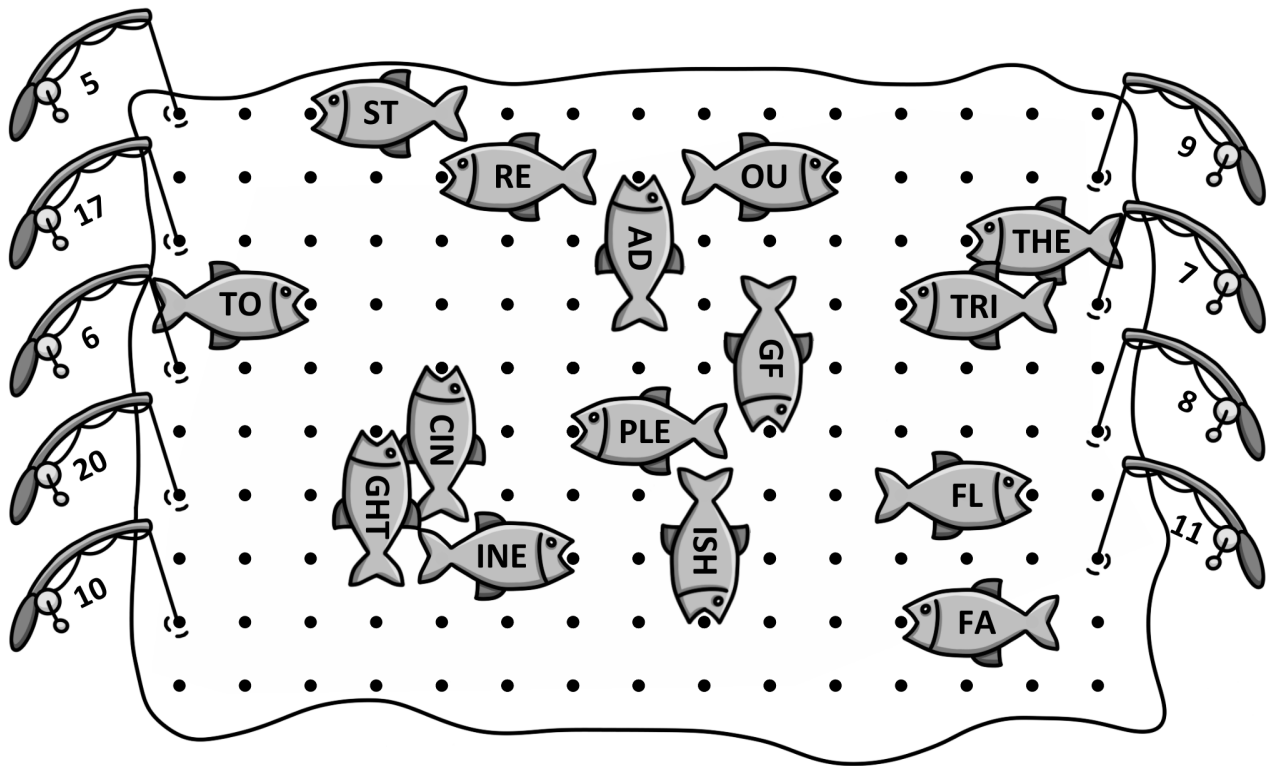

While in the Kingdom of Wisdom, Milo stumbled upon a man named Gil acting rather fishy near a pond. He called out to the man to ask what he was doing.

“It’s quite simple, my boy,” he began. “My townspeople have rejected me and thrown me out. So, I cast nine times into the pond, each at a given length of line to see if I could catch some fish. I intend to give my neighbors a piece of herring.”

With that, the water churned as all the fish scrambled to bite the hooks, not once crossing lines with each other. Strangely, Milo noticed that the lines turned at right angles; he thought to himself, “Aha, Gil must be an angler!” Milo helped Gil reel in one fish per side before returning to the other. Each and every line snapped in their combined effort, and when they had lost all 9 fish back to the pond, Gil fell to the grass exhaustedly. Milo found a stick and wrote the letters he’d seen in the dirt.

“It’s no use! With no way to restring the poles, I’ve nothing to get my revenge!” Gil began to sob, and revealing his true intentions. When he finished, Milo looked in surprise at what he had written. What did even the fish realize Gil was?

Lexy Kahn has been head detective of the Illegal Phonetic Experimentation division for over a century. In that time, she had seen and prosecuted for just about every vowel-ation imaginable. But lately, the department had been neck-deep in a plethora of cases involving the Oxymoron crime family – a group of scum-of-the-earth types who spend their days sneaking around the sewers of Dictionopolis like rodents, rostering words for their underground fighting rings.

Lexy was granted a task force by the Word-Master General to take down these vermin. On a recent bust, Lexy’s team came across six rosters for upcoming fights. She was surprised to also see members of the Oxymoron family in the rosters, starting and finishing every chain: Black Light, Cold Sweat, Dull Roar, Living Dead, Random Order, Sun Shade.

DETAINDER OF DIVERGENTS

With Milo's help, the team pieced together all six fight rosters and used the 8 directions from those rosters to find their way through the maze of sewers where the criminal nest was concealed. Without retracing their steps, Milo and Lexy walked an unknown number of steps in each specified direction taking note of the clue at every fourth step. Lexi knew if she could just find one of the Oxymorons willing to squeal on the others, she'd be all set. Only after collecting the clues did Milo realize what Lexy had the ability to do.

SPINNER OF SYNTAX

Down in the markets of Dictionopolis, Milo ran into a man named Buzz Ward shopping for ingredients. Buzz was a great fan of cooking, though his past endeavors were half-baked at best. After shopping, he brought back 14 words to make his favorite food, Word Salad. Partway through his prep, his wife walked in.

“What are you doing?” she asked, worried about what he was cooking up.

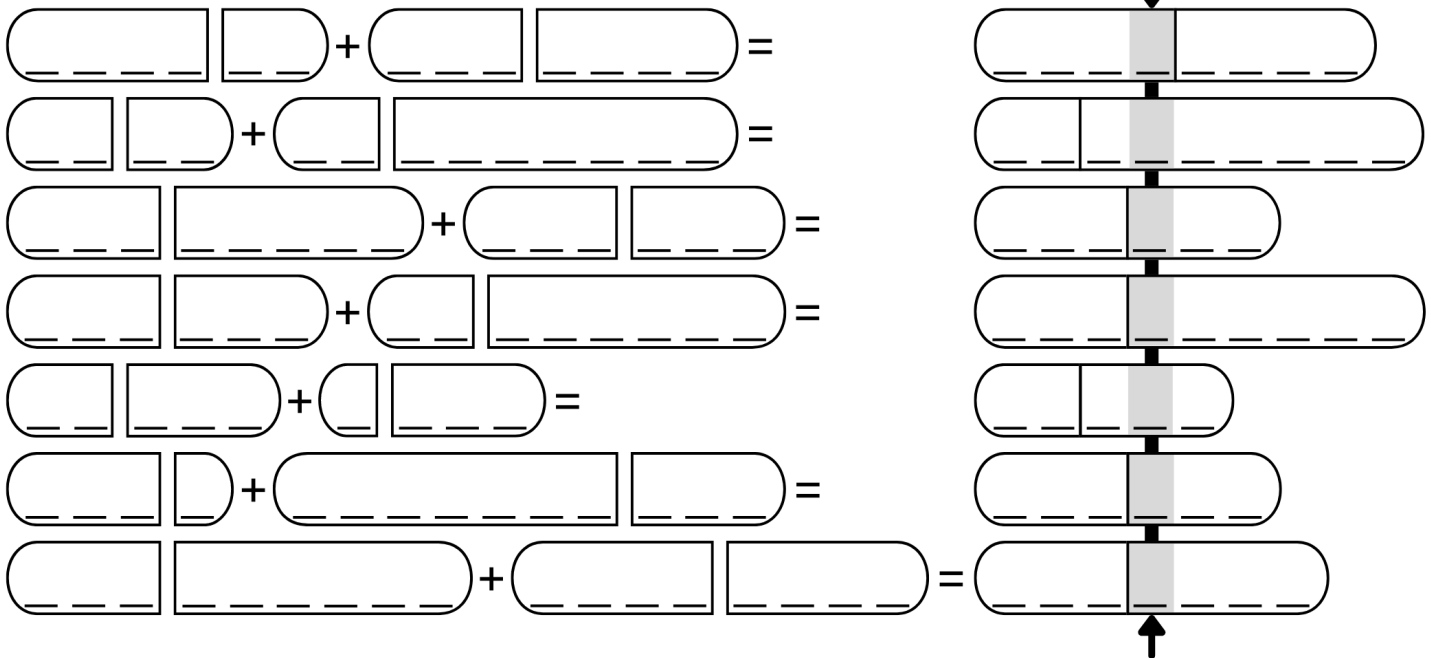

“I was just...I wanted to eat something...different,” he stuttered.

“Never mince words!” his wife shouted.

But it was too late; Buzz had already cut the original words to pieces and was about to blend pairs of them into something scrumptious.

When he had finished, Buzz had a meal that actually made the cut. What did Buzz’s wife do that evening?

WOER OF WORDS

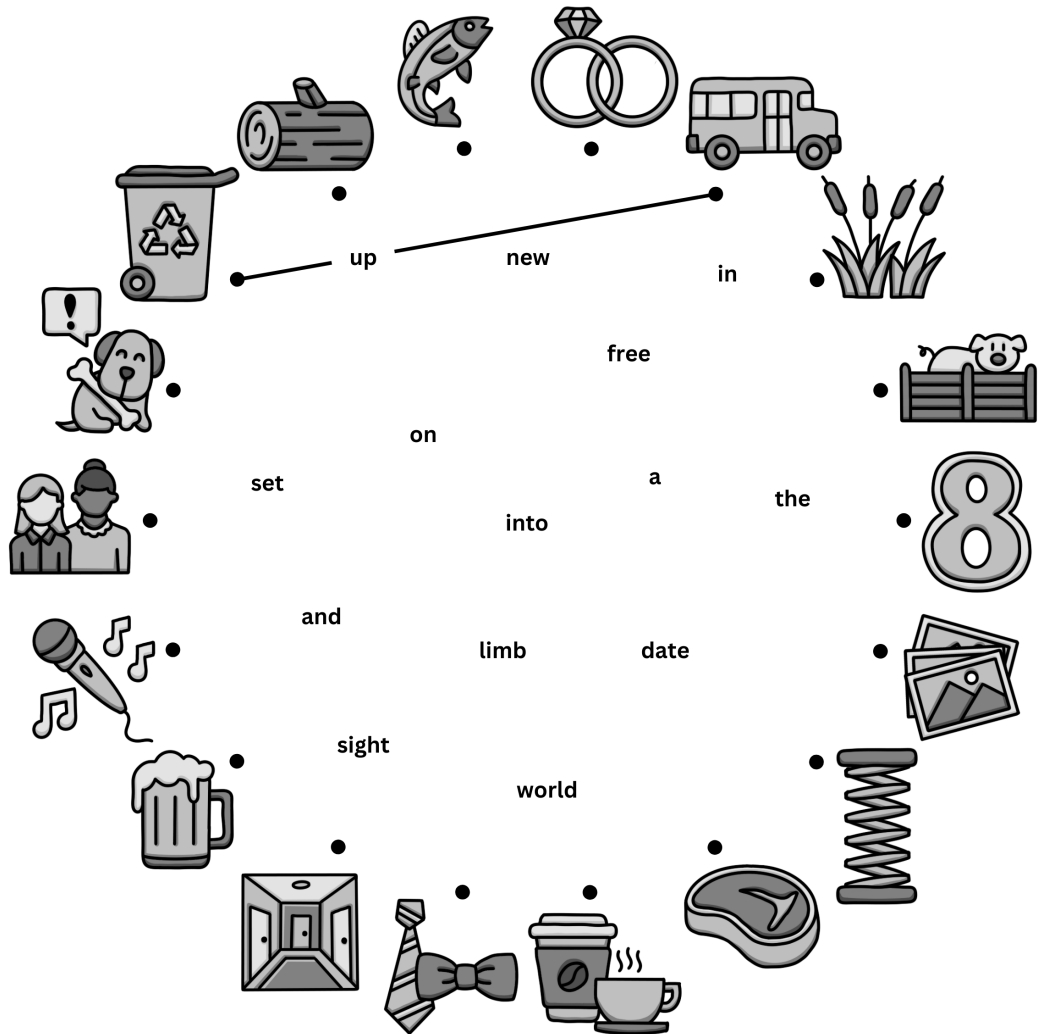

As Milo continued traversing the Kingdom, he discovered a great many uses for words. The king had made him eat his words, others broke their word, and others were just plain beyond words. In one small village, a lowly girl named Harmony was a matchmaker of words. Each week, she'd host a speed dating event for the words who'd wandered into town for a spell, setting up pairs of them in the tops of trees around the village.

"Isn't it wonderful?" she exclaimed, "even in the hearts of words, opposites attract! Hopefully they'll be willing to take a risk and make the connection."

Harmony searched for what the attracted pairs were outside of their connection to each other. And as time went on those couples who'd crossed paths with two other couples offered the best advice for dating: telling exactly where a word would have to go out to find their perfect match.

META: LEARNER OF LESSONS

Before he could return home, Milo was gifted a souvenir by which to remember the Kingdom of Wisdom. King Azaz combined all of his adventure's lessons into an orb, and with it, Milo's journey had come full circle. Milo took a moment to admire the generous gift. Sure enough, all four lessons he had learned were arranged forward or backward about the orb. Not only did the lessons complete each other, but even the consonants found themselves arranged three per row or column.

At home, Milo reverted to his old ways of boredom. He searched the orb to free himself from his monotonous dreams where he spent every second lost in what to do. One day, a series of 8 letters stuck out to him, and in that moment, he remembered the king's words upon handing him the orb: "For the days when you forget what life is without a bit of wordplay."

Milo smiled to himself. Even the orb knew what his days of snoozing life away had become.

BONUS: SEEKER OF SILENCE

In a royal decree, King Azaz had outlawed the expression of any letter as silent (except for the royal E, of course). Under cover of darkness, words would come out to play so that their letters could express themselves in whatever way they liked, some even taking a vowel of silence. So, when the word police showed up to investigate, not only did they find the silent letters but another series of words with absent letters. The officers brought in both sets of words for questioning and a placed them in a lineup.

The king requested the help of Milo to pair up words harboring the same wanted letters, and the word police handcuffed them together. The words begged the king to release them, but their request was denied; the word police stated that the king's word was final. What else did the police say the king's word was?
